» Introduction

Caring for the new employee will positively reflect on his productivity and excellence, and increase the level of his job satisfaction. As a matter of fact, the Induction program for new employees is deemed to be important since it constitutes the starting point for an ideal work relationship between the employee and his employer, and provides positive work environment for creative delivery of induction program, in order to make a good first impression with the new hires as it helps boost their passion for work and loyalty to the institution.

In line with the Federal Government directives seeking to implement the best practices in the field of HR management, the Federal Authority for Government Human Resources (FAHR) has developed the present Manual, which actually aims at supporting the ministries and the federal entities in establishing relevant induction programs based on specific policies and mechanisms for assimilation and engagement of new employees, according to the responsibilities and work nature of each authority. There may be included as well in the guide the vision, mission and objectives of the ministries or federal entities, along with the organizational structure, by-laws and regulations adopted at such authorities, and the general guidelines of the federal entities, namely the security of information, individuals and properties, the health and safety systems, and the incentive schemes.

The present Manual is considered a main reference for the creation and development of the orientation programs for new employees at the federal entities; it was developed based on several experiences, benchmarks and best pertinent practices, after consultation with the ministries and federal entities.

Chapter I:

General Scope

» First: Objectives

The present Manual is designed to provide advice and to support the ministries and federal entities in creating/updating their Induction programs for the new employees, so they become an integral part of the personnel at the ministry/federal entity. This Manual gives both partners as well the chance to know and understand each other, and ensure the commitment of both parties to performance, efficiency, and contribution to creating a productive and motivating workplace.

The present Manual consists of an orientation document which backs and supports the ministries and federal entities in the United Arab Emirates in the creation of an Induction program in accordance with the best pertinent practices.

The Manual of the Induction Program for New Employees aims at:

1. Building a new work culture at the ministries / federal entities which is based on transparency, performance and productivity.
2. Establishing a reference for the governmental HR departments in order to create the Induction and orientation programs for new employees, each at relevant authority.
3. Documenting the most important main procedures related to the Induction program for new employees.

The scope of the Induction program for new employees at the ministry / federal entity shall at least cover the following objectives:

1. Support the employee to adapt and get involved quickly in the workplace, and to understand his responsibilities.
2. Enable the employee to understand his job responsibilities.
3. Introduce the new employee to his employer (the ministry / the federal entity), and role in terms of reaching the Government objectives.

4. Provide the ministries / federal entities with motivated employees and trained on the work methods within the shortest period possible.
5. Making a positive impression on the new employee by clarifying the core elements of success at the work with the ministry / the federal entity.
6. Build the developmental and training plans for new employees by clarifying all levels of competences and skills required at the ministry / the federal entity.

» Second: Manual References:

1. The Human Resources Law at the Federal Government no. 11 of year 2008, and relevant amendments and executive regulation of the law.
2. The Human Resource Strategy at the Federal Government and its operational plan.
3. The Code of Ethics and Professional Conduct Document Service.
4. The Training and Development policy for the Employees of the Federal Government.
5. The Performance Management System for the Employees of the Federal Government.

» Third: Scope of Implementation

1. The Induction program for new employees covers all the employees who have recently joined the ministries and the federal entities, at all levels, in all positions, and at all locations.
2. It is preferable to apply the Induction program to all employees who resume work at the ministries and federal entities after work interruption of more than 12 months.

Stages and Steps of Implementation of the Induction
Program for New Employees

» First: Contents and Core Elements of the Induction Program for New Employees

The induction program for new employees covers at least the following steps:

1. The ministry or federal entity pre-joining induction program.
2. Create / update the induction program for new employees.
 - Announce the new employee.
 - The orientation/induction training.
 - The field visits.
3. Prepare the program schedule and coordinate the participations and the events.
4. Implement the induction program for new employees.
5. Evaluate the induction program for new employees.

► The Induction Program for New Employees

» Second: Period of Implementation of the Program

The induction program for new employees covers at least the following step

- The program should be implemented in the first two months following the employee's joining date with the employer.
- The period and content of the induction program shall be between one and ten working days or two weeks maximum.

» Third: Steps of Implementation of the Induction Program for New Employees

First step:

The pre-joining induction program delivered after the signing of the employment contract and undertaking the work at the ministry or federal entity.

Objective: Taking advantage of the time between the date of appointment of the employee and his work starting date.

Mechanism: Providing the new employees with some information before they join the ministry/federal entity, including:

- The employee brief guide (which contains a summary of the main information extracted from the detailed guide, and these are general information).
- The reading list recommended by the employer.

The employee brief guide covers the following information:

1. Overview of the ministry or federal entity (vision, mission, objectives) and relevant scope of work.
2. The organizational structure of the concerned ministry or federal entity.
3. The Code of Ethics and Professional Conduct Document Service
4. The policy of information security and use of internet adopted at the federal entity or any internal policies or by-laws adopted at the ministry or federal entity.
5. The HR policies and procedures.

All documents included in the pre-joining induction program of the ministry / federal entity should be:

1. Generic (not confidential).
2. Include terms which are easy to understand and without technical complications, so as to help the new employees to better understand the nature of work at the ministry or federal entity.

Second step:

The design / update of the induction program for new employees:

1. A- Announcing the new employee: the ministry or federal entity may have recourse to different practices for the announcement of new employees, including:
 - The announcement through internal means (like the circulars, the magazines, the internal network, etc...), by dedicating a part thereof to the announcement of new employees and enclosing the profile and a passport photo (preferable).
 - Introducing the employee personally through periodical activities and events at the concerned entity, and through an introduction tour covering all departments / staffs.

2. A- The orientation/induction training: the orientation training can be divided into two main parts (the initial training and the main training):

Subjects of the main orientation training:

Subjects of the initial orientation training:

1. B- The orientation/induction training: the orientation training can be divided into two main parts (the initial training and the main training): -
